The first man to set foot on the moon was called Neil Armstrong, but he was with another astronaut called Edwin Aldrin. Their journey started at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. Three astronauts took off in the spacecraft called Apollo 11 and travelled for four days across 386,160 km to get to the moon. When they got near the moon, Armstrong and Aldrin left the other astronaut, Michael Collins, behind in the command module. They flew in the smaller Lunar Module to the moon. The two astronauts explored the moon's surface. They collected about 22 kg of moon soil and rocks, set up a wind experiment and took photographs. They spent 21 hours on the moon. Then they flew back to the Command Module and joined Collins again on Apollo 11. They then flew back to Earth and landed safely.
